Career Paths and Academic Job Applications

Applications in academia differ immensely from job applications in the industry. How to structure the CV and the academic profile? What to include and what to gloss over? What career steps, relevant skills, and competencies are expected at what level? What does the cover letter ideally include? Are there special features that women must focus on?

This one-day workshop will provide you with essential field knowledge concerning various academic positions (lecturer, postdoc, junior professor/FH professor), requirements, codes, and the general modalities of academic applications. We will talk about matching offered positions, selection committees, and selection criteria.

Please bring your application documents (CV, photo, list of publications, teaching dossier etc.), an academic job offer and your corresponding cover letter in digital form to the workshop.

Coach

Dr. Dunja Mohr, Go Academic!, Munich, is a coach for scientists. For more than fifteen years, she has offered academic skills workshops and career counselling for international and national academics of various career stages on behalf of universities, foundations, excellence clusters, Graduate schools, including the FAU's Ariadne mentoring program.

Publishing in Science, Technology, Engineering and Medicine

Publishing research results plays a central role in scientific communication. Publications are the basis of validating and disseminating research, and they are instrumental in the protection of intellectual property rights. In recent years, the Internet has paved new ways for scientific publishing as an alternative to established journals, which increasingly gain in importance.

The workshop, which takes place in cooperation with the university library, focuses on current challenges and opportunities of scientific publishing. It will provide an overview of forms of scientific publications (monographs, articles in scientific journals, open access publishing), an introduction to legal issues (publication agreements, intellectual property rights), as well as briefly outline potential ways of financing and marketing one's scientific publications, among other issues. Furthermore, the most important bibliometric methods of measuring research output will be presented.

Conflict Management: Constructively Dealing With Conflict

The ability to deal with conflict is a key factor for personal and professional success. In this workshop, participants will learn how to resolve conflicts effectively and confidently. They will be trained to distinguish between constructive and destructive conflicts and to facilitate communication to both prevent a disagreement from becoming a conflict and to de-escalate conflicts. Finally, the participants' ability to see the great potential in conflicts will be strengthened. The differences between male and female behaviour will also be a topic in this workshop.

Topics:

- Analysing one's own behaviour and how one communicates within conflict
- Recognizing and understanding conflict dynamics and the nine levels of conflict escalation
- Constructive communication: Helpful conversation techniques during conflicts
- The impact of personality on dealing with conflict
- Solution-orientated approaches in conflict
- Strategies for constructive conflict resolutions
